While the populations of North America and Europe are aging leaving behind a very minority white population of children, has the U.N. decided to wage a campaign to save the white people? No. But they are concerned about jobs for the migrants. And while they are not concerned about the white elderly population (that's all you baby boomers out there) who will be at the mercy of an extremely large, young, and violently angry non-white population, what does the U.N. want to do about it? Absolutely nothing - unless you are a non-white migrant. Even under a soon to be bankrupt social security system, the U.N. still wants to ensure that non-white migrants from developing countries can get social security pensions in their new destination countries. Still, the U.S. stands firmly committed to U.N. goals. Look at this picture. This could be you or it could be your mom or sister. If you are elderly now, this could be your child in fifty years. Do you really have any concept of the horror our elderly white men and women will suffer at the hands of non-whites as they completely take over our former white nations?
