Information for YOU!

By Rachel Pendergraft, national spokeswoman for The Knights - The continuing debate over women in combat is gaining more prominence due to the ongoing war on terrorism. In addition, Radical feminist groups and many liberal minded men's groups are adamant that women be included should a draft be imposed. Mrs. Elaine Donnelly, director of the the Center for Military Readiness says, "female soldiers, ncluding young mothers, should not have to pay the price for Pentagon bureaucratic blunders and gender-based recruiting quotas that have caused apparent shortages in male soldiers for the new land-combat brigades," Mrs. Donnelly said. *"It does not make sense to sacrifice the advantage of modular organizations, just to make ideological points about gender equality. However, I think that it shows the moral weakening of the nation when such little reverence is given to women as to allow a minority of them to dictate the future state of motherhood for the whole.

There is a big difference between serving in the military in valuable support positions, which can be very dangerous as well, and putting the whole future of womanhood at risk because a few want to shoot it out. And yes, war is less physical today than in the past. But as Christians we must remember that we are in a war now. God has already given us the battle plan.

Christian men and women working together are to subdue the land and build up Christian governments until Christ returns to literally rule over earth for forever. Christian men and women are already soldiers of the cross and parenthood is intended to be one of our most important missions; that is why the mission of motherhood is attacked so vehemently. The anti-Christ doesn't want any more new little Christians in the world. These views are not due to any wishes of discrimination toward women. Women have risen to the occasion throughout history when faced with a relentless enemy that threatened her people, nation, and family, and many women have behaved very courageously. Women have often times had to take up arms to defend liberty and every woman should know the art of defense should they ever need it. However, the respectful position that women and motherhood held within society also dictated their protection at all cost. If women were forced by situation to use her God given right to self-defense it usually meant the men weren't or were unable to fulfill this duty themselves. It used to be a concept appreciated by women, and today smart women still appreciate it. But a small minority of women hate the idea of motherhood; to them the idea is preposterous. Of course, not all women are able to be mothers and their contributions are just as valuable. But, the fact is, most women wish to be mothers at some point in their lifetime and some women despise this attitude. And sadly they are shaping the ideas many women and men have today. Too many men and certainly the media have no respect for the role of wife and mother, so why would they care if women began dying in mass while serving in combat positions? And some that claim respect want to limit women to housework. Women should be respected for the contributions they make to society and revered for their role of mother. Not the act of becoming a mother but for the skill, intelligence, thoughtfulness, insight, diligence, and grace required for mothering and home management. Women, you should be very wary of women's groups who claim to know what you're thinking. If they get their way women will be seen as another war time commodity and they will take our children from us when they deem that our time to serve has come and we won't have the option to say no.

The Knights is pro-life, pro-family, Christian, and law-abiding. We believe that the family is the most important, although the smallest, government ever established by God. A nation can not stand if it's families are in shambles or are under attack.
